

Julie Choi immigrated to America from Korea at the age of seven. She earned a bachelor's degree in political science at UCLA, then graduated from Whittier Law School and practiced entertainment law before switching gears to producing television. Since then, she's produced shows on a wide range of networks, from NBC, CBS, ABC, and Fox to cable channels such as MTV, Lifetime, BET, Oxygen, HGTV and WE tv, and produced hit shows such as Dancing With the Stars and The Biggest Loser. She has also been involved in development at the CW and BET. She joined MNet through her agents at CAA and is excited to build and grow a network for a new generation of Asian Americans.
